Subway accessibility issues were tragically exposed Monday after Malaysia Goodson, 22, was killed falling down a flight of stairs carrying her daughter and stroller at a station that has no elevator. 6-7

Malaysia Goodson didn't have to die. Disabled groups have been fighting for better trains for everyone, for decades. The fact that it's taken this long for this problem to get coverage is, frankly, embarrassing. Assault on 'Empire' actor investigated as hate crime

Chicago police on Tuesday said they were investigating an assault on "Empire" actor Jussie Smollett as a possible hate crime after two men yelled racial and homophobic slurs and wrapped a rope around his neck. The 36-year-old African-American actor, who is gay, was reported to be in good condition after taking himself to a hospital after the incident early Tuesday, police said. "Given the severity of the allegations, we are taking this investigation very seriously and treating it as a possible hate crime," Chicago police said in a statement. Police did not identify Smollett by name, but gave his age and said he had a role on "Empire." Fox reps confirmed he was the victim. "We are deeply saddened and outraged to learn that a member of our 'Empire' family, Jussie Smollett, was viciously attacked last night," Fox officials said in an emailed statement.

No motive found for Vegas mass shooting that killed 58

The FBI has found no clear motive for the slaying of 58 people by a sniper firing down at an outdoor concert in Las Vegas in 2017, the agency said on Tuesday after a yearlong investigation of the deadliest mass shooting in modern U.S. history. According to an FBI report, the gunman, Stephen Paddock, 64, was no different from many other mass shooters. The report also found no evidence that any ideo logical or political beliefs motivated Paddock, who also wounded more than 800 in the shooting rampage on Oct. 1, 2017. "There was no single or clear motivating factor behind Paddock's attack," the FBI's Behavioral Analysis Unit said. Paddock acted alone when he planned and carried out the attack, firing more than 1,000 rounds during 11 minutes from the 32nd floor of the Mandalay Bay Resort and Casino.

Khabib, McGregor suspended after UFC brawl

The Nevada State Athletic Commission suspended UFC fighters Khabib Nurmagomedov and Conor Mc-Gregor in a unanimous vote Tuesday for their involvement in a brawl after their lightweight championship bout at UFC 229 in October. Nurmagomedov (27-0) was suspended nine months, with the opportunity to reduce to six months by participating in an anti-bullying campaign. McGregor (21-4) was suspended six months. Both suspensions are retroactive to the night of the fight, Oct. 6, meaning McGregor and Nurmagomedov — if he participates in the campaign - will be eligible to compete again starting April 6. Both fighters were also fined — $500,000 for Nurmagomedov and $50,000 for McGregor. Nurmagomedov tweeted an apparent reaction to the punishment Tuesday, writing only, "politics forever.

'IRA' claims responsibility for Londonderry car bomb

A group calling itself the "IRA" said it was responsible for placing the car bomb which detonated in Londonderry in a statement sent to the Derry Journal on Tuesday. Northern Irish police said the main focus of the investigation was on the New IRA one of a small number of groups opposed to a 1998 peace deal that largely ended three decades of violence in the British-run province. "We also caution those who collaborate with the British that they are to desist immediately as no more warnings will be given," the statement read. No one was injured in the blast outside a courthouse on Jan. 19. Police in Northern Ireland and European Union member Ireland have said that a return to a hard border between the two after Britain leaves the E.U., complete with customs and other checks, could see a return to strife.

NYC weather: Subzero windchills in forecast for frigid week

A blast of arctic air is expected to bring windchills from minus 10 to minus 20 degrees Thursday, leading to possible record lows for New York City weather.

New York City weather will turn frigid this week as a blast of arctic air is set to bring below-zero windchills across the region, according to the National Weather Service.

The New York City Emergency Management Department issued a travel advisory for Tuesday and Wednesday, warning that rain could transition to snow late on Tuesday, leading to a messy evening commute. On Wednesday, though precipitation is expected to taper off in the morning, forecasters can't rule out a scattered snow shower that could drop 2 inches of snow, "with a worstcase of 3 inches possible."

New York City weather will also be windy on Wednesday, with gusts up to 45 miles per hour pos-

"A wintry mix of snow and rain could cause for messy commutes Tuesday and Wednesday. The combination of snow and the decrease in temperatures may produce spots of black ice. We advise New Yorkers to take mass transit where possible, exercise caution, and allow for extra travel time," said NYC Emergency Management Commissioner Joseph Esposito in a statement. "Frigid temperatures will also return. Stay indoors as much as possible. If you have to go outdoors, limit your time and bundle up.'

The forecasted high for Wednesday is just under freezing, though windchills will make it feel even colder, closer to 10 degrees. Wednesday night temperatures are expected to dip to a low of 6 degrees, though the windchill could make it feel as cold as 15 below zero.

Though no precipitation is in the forecast for Thursday, that's not the end of this bitter New York City weather. The expected high Thursday is just 16 degrees, but once again bone-chilling breezes will result in windchills from minus 10 to minus 20 degrees in the morning, and near zero degrees midday.

"While winds slowly decrease, windchills will remain below zero for the majority of this period, only rising a degree or so above zero for a few hours Thursday afternoon," forecasters wrote.

Record low temperatures are possible, according to the National Weather Service.

"Freezing cold temperatures and winter weather are no joke," said Health Commissioner Dr. Oxiris Barbot in a statement. "Extreme cold poses danger for all New Yorkers, but especially those at risk for hypothermia, like those without heat at home, and those who drink heavily or use drugs and become incapacitated outdoors."

New Yorkers should stay inside as much as possible, but if you do go outside, please dress warmly, wearing layers," she added. "If you are without heat at home, call 311. Stay alert for signs of hypothermia, like intense shivering or dizziness, and if you experience them, seek medical attention or

Protesters gather in Long Island City last year to say no to the Amazon HQ2 decision. GETTY IMAGES

Teamsters join anti-Amazon HQ2 effort

The union demands better treatment of city workers.

Amazon nounced it would build its second headquarters in Long Island City, activists immediately spoke out against the deal. Now, the New York City Teamsters union has joined an effort to oppose HQ2 in Queens.

The Teamsters joined a coalition created by the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union (RWDSU) against HQ2 this week. Both unions sent joint letters to city and state officials announcing their partnership against Amazon HQ2 and requesting the tech giant change "the way it operates in New York."

Amazon has historically been anti-union, though its workers, especially those at Amazon warehouses, have repeatedly attempted to organize. Labor issues plague the company, with employees voicing concerns about safety, inadequate pay, unreasonable forced overtime and more.

Multiple workers have died at Amazon facilities.

"Jeff Bezos needs to come to the Staten Island fulfillment center to speak with his associates and to see how we are being treated firsthand,' said Rashad Long, a worker there, in a statement. "We are not robots. We are human beings. We cannot come into work after only four hours of sleep and be expected to be fully energized and ready to work. ... I feel like all the company cares about is getting their products out to the customers as quickly as possible, no matter what that means for us workers in the end."

Union members and community groups will rally against Amazon HQ2 on Wednesday morning prior to City Council's second oversight hearing on HQ2. Council Member Jimmy Van Bramer, who represents Long Island City, will attend the "Rally to Stop the Amazon HQ2 Scam" as well.

With HQ2 expected to bring 25,000 more Amazon jobs to New York City, these unions say the company needs to change its practices.

"We applaud your commitment to bring jobs to New York, but also believe serve better than they are getting from Amazon,' the unions wrote in their letters to Gov. Andrew Cuomo and Mayor Bill de Blasio. "We urge you to work with us to ensure that Amazon changes the way it operates in New York, and that Amazon commits to allowing its workers to assert their right to form a union without interference."

If the company won't change, it expect the shouldn't promised $3 billion of subsidies from taxpayers, said George Miranda. president of Teamsters Joint Council 16, in a statement.

Applebaum, Stuart president of RWDSU, added that it's "irrational" for New York to give such large taxpayer subsidies already critiqued by many who say that money could have funded desperately needed MTA repairs — to "one of the most antiworker, anti-union corporations in the world."

"We applaud your commitment to bring jobs to New York, but also believe that New York workers deserve better than they are getting from Amazon."

Joint letter from unions

"No public official can call themselves progressive or pro-worker or pro-union if they accept or ignore Amazon's labor record," he added in a statement.

Amazon disputed that it has safety issues and said it already offers the benefits that these unions are requesting for New York workers.

"We are excited to work with New Yorkers over the coming months and years to bring a new Amazon headquarters to Long Island City and help support the community, the company said in a statement. "We expect our new headquarters to generate more than $27 billion in new tax revenues for community improvements and the people of New York."

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers "Don't Get ANY Surgery Until You SeeThis..."

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best "Treatment Formula" For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going is be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news. Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD medic has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

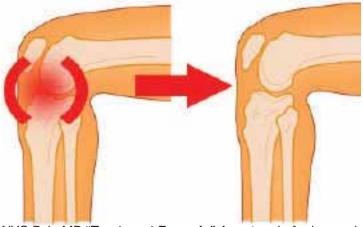

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD "Treatment Formula" A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW....

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these "gel injections" without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patent. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our "Treatment Formula."

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action... step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

Young mother falls to her death carrying stroller down MTA subway

The fatality marks the MTA's long history of station inaccessibility.

More than three-quarters of New York City's subway stations are handicap-inaccessible, either with elevators or at street level. What had previously been a nuisance and barrier to entry for New Yorkers with disabilities may have claimed a life on Monday, as Malaysia Goodson, forced to carry a stroller down the stairs at the Seventh Avenue/53rd Street Station, fell and died.

The MTA called the death of Goodson, 22, "a heartbreaking tragedy" and reported that "the MTA, medical examiner's office and NYPD are conducting a full investigation.'

Goodson was found unconscious on the subway platform with her 1-year-old daughwho was safely tucked in her stroller. The NYPD had not andefinitively nounced what the cause of death was, as the NYC mediexaminer's office had not yet conducted an autopsy. Both the police and the family told NBC that they're not sure if Goodson fell down the stairs or if she had some kind of medical episode.

Goodson worked at a day care in Stamford, Connecticut, and was in town visiting her cousin. Her daughter Rhylee was unhurt and is with her father and grandmother.

Parents, activists and attorneys have railed against the MTA's underfunded and undermaintained infrastructure for years.

The MTA is currently the subject of two classaction lawsuits filed by disability rights advo-cates for its notoriously inaccessible stations: one for failing to provide elevators in the city's other 355 of 472 subway stations, and the other for failing to properly maintain the ones that it does have. According to disability advocacy group Transit-Center's research, an average of 25 elevators go out of service every day.

To start with, despite preparing to spend almost $10 million to "deep clean" subway stations, the MTA only ensures subway stairs are clean and safe to use once per day.

"You see it every day: parents with strollers lugging kids in tow up and down station stairs, struggling. And that's unacceptable," Wright, TransitCenter's senior advocacy associate, told Metro. "It shouldn't take somebody dying to bring attention to the issue of accessibility. A broad and diverse segment of riders rely on elevators.'

The lack of elevators is problematic on its own, but Dominique Penson, a partner at the personal injury law firm Barasch McGarry Salzman & Penson, reports that the staircases many parents and people with disabilities are forced to use aren't in much better shape. To start with, despite preparing to spend almost $10 million to "deep clean" subway stations, the MTA only ensures subway stairs are clean and safe to use once per day.

existed, there have been unfortunately poor conditions in some parts of the system," said Penson. "Stairs that are dangerous, stairs that are slippery, stairs that are dirty, stairs that are not cleaned enough, stairs that are rickety, handrails that are loose whatever problems can exist on a set of stairs when you've got millions of people going up and down, those problems are going to come often."

"You see it every day: parents with strollers lugging kids in tow up and down station stairs, struggling. And that's unacceptable."

Colin Wright, TransitCenter's senior advocacy associate

The lack of accessibility options doesn't just affect those dealing with physical disabilities, either. According to Penson, the lack of elevators makes the subways more dangerous for everyone.

"When you're carrying things, it's hard to see the next step you're going to take," he said. "And people will miss a step, or just lose their balance."

There's no shortage of problems with the MTA's infrastructure: NYCT President Andy Byford's Fast Forward plan is an indication. According to Penson, the MTA has been dodging responsibility from the very beginning.

"The MTA is one of the most intransigent litigants I've ever come across. When you have cases against the City of New York, I find them to be actually reasonable in assessing its cases, recognizing its liability when it's there and trying to settle cases," Penson told Metro. "The MTA, I tell you, never. Never but never but never. It doesn't matter how good the case is, they don't settle anything."

This combativeness doesn't help the MTA in the long run, Penson argues. In addition to refusing to ever adresponsibility mit for injuries on the subway, the MTA doesn't even win the cases they insist on bringing to trial. And at the current rate work, the MTA will be fully ADAcompliant in the year 2100.

"Nobody should ever walk by a parent strug-gling with their stroller without helping, but it shouldn't take the kindness of strangers to get people on the subway," Wright said. "Accessibility isn't something that's nice to have, it's an absolutely essential part of our subway system ... We don't have any time to waste. This is literally killing people, and we need to provide an accessible subway for everybody.'

'El Chapo' defense rests after one witness

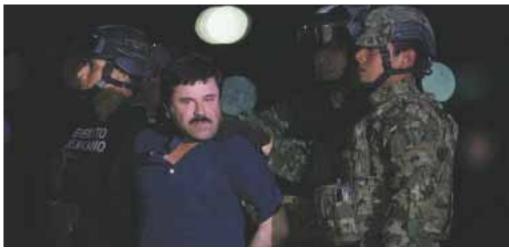

Closing arguments are scheduled to begin on Wednesday and expected to last about two days.

Attorneys for accused Mexican drug lord Joa-quin "El Chapo" Guzman rested his defense after calling a single witness who testified for less than half an hour on Tuesday morning, putting the case on track to go to the jury as early as Friday.

Closing arguments are scheduled to begin on Wednesday and expected to last about two days. After that, U.S. District Judge Brian Cogan, who is presiding over the trial in Brooklyn federal court, will instruct the jury so it can begin deliberating Guzman's fate.

The brief defense case was in sharp contrast to the 10-week presentation put on by prosecutors, who called over 50 witnesses to testify. Guzman said on Monday that he would not testify in his own defense.

Guzman, 61, was extradited to the United States in January 2017 and has been on trial since November. Prosecutors have accused him of trafficking massive quantities of cocaine, heroin and other drugs into the United States as leader of the Sinaloa cartel, named for his home state in northern Mexico.

His lawyers have argued that he was framed by the cartel's real leader, Ismael "El Mayo" Zambada.

only witness The called by Guzman was Paul Roberts, an FBI agent who took part in a 2017 interview of Jorge Cifuentes, a Colombian drug trafficker currently in U.S. custody.

Guzman's Jeffrey Lichtman, noted Roberts was a "not exactly friendly" witness for his client but elicited testimony from the FBI agent that appeared to contradict something Cifuentes said at trial. Roberts said that, according to his interview notes, Cifuentes said he was shown evidence of an investigation against him in 2010 by a U.S. naval intelligence officer, not a Colombian naval intelligence officer as he said on the stand.

Cifuentes, family ran a powerful drug trafficking organization in Colombia, was one of 14 so-called cooperating witnesses who agreed to testify against Guzman after striking plea deals with U.S. prosecutors. Their testimony was the heart of the prosecutors' sprawling case.

Lichtman also read jurors an agreement between Guzman and the prosecutors about how another FBI agent would have testified if called. Lichtman said the agent would have said that Jorge Cifuentes' brother Alex Cifuentes once told law enforcement officials that Guzman incurred $20 million in debt between 2007 and 2013.

Lichtman said in a court filing last week that he wanted that evidence to show Guzman was not a wealthy kingpin. REUTERS

NY legislator calling for state to lower drunk driving limit

The legal limit for a New York driver's blood alcohol level could drop from .08 to .05 under a bill recently proposed in the New York State Assembly.

Democratic New York Assemblyman Felix Ortiz is sponsoring the legislation to change the legal blood alcohol level threshold for drinking and driving, citing a recommendation by the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering and Medicine.

In a report released Jan. 17, the collective science academy called for a lower blood alcohol limit to curb the more than 10,000 alcohol-impaired driving deaths that occur each year across the country.

A .05 percent blood alcohol concentration (BAC), rather than .08, could save thousands of lives, per the report.

Lowering legal blood alcohol level limit is not unprecedented. Multiple countries, including Austria, Denmark and Japan, have enacted laws capping the legal blood alcohol level to drive at .05, demonstrating that this change is an "effective policy," according to the National Academies.

All but one of the 50 states currently prohibit driving with a blood alcohol level of .08. Utah is the only outlier, becoming the first state to lower its legal BAC limit to .05 with a new law that went into effect Dec. 30.

Some health experts may be happy about the change, but not everyone would be thrilled to see this happen in New York.

The American Beverage Institute announced its opposition to Ortiz's bill on Tuesday, saying in a statement that while wellintentioned, it would "do little to save lives because it re-deploys limited traffic safety resources to target moderate and responsible social drinkers, rather than focusing on high-BAC and repeat drunk driving offenders who are responsible for the vast majority of alcohol-related traffic deaths."

In New York, nearly 70 percent of alcoholimpaired traffic deaths involve a driver with a BAC of 0.15 or above, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. Only 2 percent of traffic deaths involve someone with a blood alcohol level between .05 and .08.

On average, it takes one to two drinks for a woman to hit a blood alcohol level of .05, and two to three drinks for most men. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

POLITENESS POLICE, REVISITED In the past, I wrote to you about how annoying and obnoxious I feel it is for someone to yell out "You're welcome!" if they just held a door open for you, and you, god forbid, forgot to say "Thank you." Today's news is the case in point. A 22-yearold woman was killed trying to get her baby in a stroller down subway stairs. She fell. Suppose someone refused to help because she didn't say "please." I myself have had the awful experience of carrying a double stroller, with two infants in it, up subway stairs, with no one offering to help, and then reaching the top of the stairs and door out, only to hear the obnoxious "You're welcome!" while I was still trying to catch my breath and my heart was palpitating. Before you become POLITENESS POLICE, be observant. Notice the situation and decide if you are negligent in being of aid to someone in need, even without a "please"

Beyond the katsu sando

Chef Corwin Kave is ready to show there's more to Don Wagyu than that infamous $180 sandwich.

EVA KIS eva.kis@metro.us

When Don Wagyu opened in the Financial District with a $180 katsu sando (Japanese steak sandwich) on the menu, chef Corwin Kave knew to brace for the backlash.

"I've personally had a ton of experience with Asian food being devalued," says Kave, who used to run the kitchen at the dear departed Fatty Crab. "We were in the Meatpacking District when it was just turning a corner and becoming a pretty hip place to be, and we were selling Singaporean, Thai and Malay cuisine, sometimes fairly classic and sometimes with a twist. And we got a lot of flack for the prices we were charging, which were by no means extraordinary: $16 for a dish versus $8 or $9 you could pay in Chinatown.

"And it's like, 'Well, there's all the obvious reasons: the neighborhood, the ambience, the restaurant that we were trying to create. But it was so strange — I know how expensive these products are and how much work goes into these cuisines."

Wagyu beef, he says, is no exception. "I think specifically with Wagyu beef, it's a lack of education and lack of appreciation for what the difference is. People look at the sandwich and they're like, 'Why would I ever pay $180 for a sandwich?' But if I took that exact same piece of beef and grilled it, sliced it and served it with a sauce, you might think it was expensive but you wouldn't say that it was unreasonable.'

That $180 sandwich is made with Wagyu beef sourced from a single farm in the Miyazaki district, which has a reputation as one of the best areas for growing cattle. Need convincing? Kave keeps pictures on his phone of the beef so marbled with fat from a diet rich in beer mash, sake leaves and olives, it's pink instead of red.

Now that the weekday katsu sando business has settled into a rhythm, it's time for Kave to show off the skills he's accumulated beyond perfectly frying a piece of pillowy steak. After entering culinary school at age 17, he traveled through Southeast Asia extensively, cooking wherever he could. Back in New York, he ran with Zak Pelaccio and the Fatty Crab crew through several restaurants including Chop Suey in Times Square.

Yes, you do get a few bites of the famous Ozaki katsu sando.

Most recently, Kave got in gfam and up dients shishit with the could. But three k But parture Island ship is a limost from the could be a simple ship in the could be a s into seasonal vegetables at Ducked Up inside the members-only club Ludlow House.

He's now combining all of those experiences into the new Dinner After Dark tasting menu at Don Wagyu — an atmospheric little hole-inthe-wall with counter seating for up to eight in a setting perfectly suited to the soundtrack of French artists covering American hits from the '50s. The menu is still very much Don Wagyu — taking familiar comfort food and upgrading the ingredients — like a tempura shishito pepper filled with trimmings from all three kinds of beef.

But there are total departures, too, like Long Island scallops in a sea of almost savory blood-orange broth with seasonal fruits. A carrot curry with golden trout roe sways between sweet and savory. And yes, you do get a scaled-down version of the Ozaki katsu sando.

Highly recommended are the drink pairings ($50), ranging from a Japanese saison to a California red. There's also sake and a dry riesling paired with a Wagyu bao. Like that infamous katsu sando, you've gotta try it to understand.

Don Wagyu is located at 28 S. William St. Dinner After Dark begins Feb. 1 on Thurs/Fri at 8:30 p.m. for $100; resy.com

What to watch instead of the Super Bowl on Sunday

If you're not a Patriots or Rams fan, there are plenty of other options on TV.

ANDREW HUSBAND

This Sunday, TV sets and streaming screens across America will be tuned to Super Bowl 2019. While the New England Patriots and Los Angeles Rams square off for the coveted Super Bowl LIII rings, plenty of other TV and movie options will be available to watch. Here are just a few options available to everyone from Netflix subscribers to cable diehards.

"The ABC Murders" (Amazon Prime)

. Based on the Agatha Christie novel of the same name, "The ABC Murders" stars John Malkovich as the famous literary detective Hercule Poirot. The story follows Poirot as he tries to solve a series of murders throughout Britain that are being committed by someone who's using the country's railway system. The limited series premieres Feb. 1 and stars former Harry Potter actor Rupert Grint, Andrew Buchan, Anya Chalotra, Eamon Farren, Jack Farthing, Tara Fitzgerald, Shirley Henderson and many more.

"Russian Doll" (Netflix)

Created by Natasha Lyonne, Amy Poehler and Leslye Headland, "Russian Doll" stars the former as a young woman named Nadia who's having difficulty coming to terms with her life. A party meant to celebrate it, however, quickly becomes as surreal as it is comedically dangerous when she begins to experience it over and over again. All episodes of "Russian Doll" premieres Feb. 1.

"Into the Dark: Down" (Hulu)

The latest episode of Hulu and Blumhouse's horror anthology series "Into the Dark: Down," follows a pair of office workers, Guy (Matt Lauria) and Jennifer (Natalie Martinez), who get trapped in an elevator over a long Valentine's Day weekend. What at first promises to be a romantic connection ultimately turns dangerous and horrifying when the two turn on each other. This episode premieres Feb. 1, while previous entries are already available to

Puppy Bowl XV (Animal Planet)

Animal Planet's annual alternative to the Super Bowl telecast returns in the form of Puppy Bowl XV. Although it's actually airing at 3 p.m., which is four full hours before the Super Bowl 2019 telecast, dog fanatics are encouraged to tune in before and after it's broadcast. Per usual, the "playing field" will consist of "players" recruited from various animal shelters. Young kangaroos will serve as the sideline cheerleaders and kittens will occupy the stands.

Kitten Bowl VI (Hallmark) Not one to be outdone by Animal Planet, the Hallmark Channel has been broadcasting its own Super Bowl alternative for the past few years. Dubbed the Kitten Bowl, this year's version will premiere at 2 p.m., an hour before the Puppy Bowl. Much like its Animal Planet counterpart, Hallmark's TV event is fueled by adoption candidates from animal shelters across the country and encourages viewers to donate or adopt pets.

"Harry Potter" movie marathon (Syfy)

If you're feeling a bit more rambunctious, there's always the troll's option for Super Bowl 2019. Syfy is airing a Harry Potter movie marathon all weekend and the final three films ("The Half-Blood Prince" and "The Deathly Hallows" parts one and two) are scheduled for Sunday. So take a page out of Daniel Radcliffe's book and root against Tom Brady's Patriots by cheering on the students of Hogwarts instead of the NFL's hodgepodge of multi-million dollar commercials and occasional gameplay.

Dan Patrick: 'I would never bet against Brady'

The legendary sportscaster talks the GOAT and his new series "Undeniable."

sportscaster Dan Patrick has learned quite a few lessons throughout his nearly four-decade career. But when it comes to this weekend's Super Bowl, the only advice he can offer won't make fans outside of New England happy: Don't bet against Tom Brady and the Patriots.

As the Pats prepare to face Los Angeles on Sunday, Patrick already has an idea of what the outcome will be. After all, he was there for Brady's "upset" win against the Rams in 2002, as well as most of his subsequent Super Bowl appearances. He even handed Brady and the Patriots their trophies after their big victory over the Seahawks in 2015.

"I would never bet against Brady and [Bill] Belichick," Patrick tells Metro. "I've learned my lessons down through the years. I was there for Brady's first Super Bowl and, at the time, I thought it was one of the bigger upsets because they beat the 'Greatest Show on Turf.' And then you start to realize that wasn't that big of an upset."

You can see why Patrick found it "amusing" that the Patriots were considered underdogs against the Chiefs during the AFC Championship. Of course, Brady and company ended up proving the sportscaster right with their 37-31 win in overtime.

"I don't think for a second that the Patriots are underdogs," says Patrick. "I'll never, ever think that they're underdogs.'

While Patrick won't be manning the desk for NBC during this year's Super Bowl, fans still have plenty of ways to see the sports icon do what he does best thanks to his popular talk radio program "The Dan Patrick Show" as well as his new gig with the AT&T Audience Network. Patrick is replacing fellow sportscasting star Joe Buck as the host of the in-depth interview series "Undeniable," which returns for season 6 on Wednesday

This season will once again feature a number of high-profile guests, including former NFL linebacker Ray Lewis, exboxing champ Oscar De la Hoya, former Olympian Carl Lewis and so many more. The former ESPN anchor and "Football Night in America" host was interested in the role because it would allow him to explore long-form interviews, which he considers "a lost art."

"This is not where they are now or where they were as an athlete, where they started and the obstacles that led to them becoming great,' says Patrick. "I enjoy the process of going down memory lane with them. And then you take a couple of off-road expeditions with them and sur-

"Undeniable" has a pair of notable names behind the scenes as well, including actor Vince Vaughn and former "A Christmas Story" star Peter Billingsley, who serve as executive producers. "They're both involved and are both very critical of how they want it to look, sound and feel," Patrick says.

Having interviewed thousands of athletes and celebrities throughout his career, Patrick knows the perfect recipe for a great interview. The keys are to get out of the way, leave the ego at the door and let the subject tell their story.

"I don't want somebody to say, 'Those were eat questions," says Patrick. "I great want some-body to say, Those were great answers."

Patrick reveals that doesn't use any paper containing interview questions when he speaks with guests on "Undeniable," however, he does have a roadmap for each chat, which stems from six hours of research he devotes to each person. The combination of his preparation and conversational style is what allows him to broach heavier subjects with his guests, such as Tony Stewart's fatal crash with Kevin Ward Jr. in 2014 or Lewis' infamous murder trial.

"Those aren't easy topics to get to, and even when you get to them, what can I get out of you? What haven't you told somebody?" says Patrick. "Those were challenges as well. It's all-encompassing of what you're talking about. I want to make you laugh. I'm going to make you cry. I'm going to make you think. I might make you angry. But those are all things that would come up in a normal conversation when you're looking back through somebody's career.'

As for what keeps Patrick motivated after all the years, the sportscaster admits that he still enjoys all the surprises that can happen during any given game.

You can script a lot of other things, but you can't script this."

Easy ways to relieve stress while packing for a move

PAT KING

Moving into a new apartment can be a seriously perplexing emotional catch-22. At first, the joy you feel from locking down a new place to crash is one of the best feelings in the world. But as soon as the ink dries on your new contract, your brain goes into overdrive thinking about all of the things that you will have to take care of as you shift your life in a major way. This can be double for anxious people (like yours truly), who seem to blow every little thing out of proportion. Here are four things you can do to help relieve some stress between now and when you move.

Transfer your accounts early

Transferring accounts like your electric, gas and cable bills are usually an afterthought when you think about moving into a new apartment. But, by setting up your new accounts in your new place early on, you will avoid that four-hour, back-on-hold phone call with your cable provider in the last week of your move. That's some stress no one needs, whether you are moving or not. In this case, it's better to rip that Band-Aid off earlier in the process.

Make a checklist and assign chores

Okay, so you've just signed a lease on a new apartment and the move-in date is just under a month away. While you are still riding high from the prospect of a new place, you've just walked into your old one to see the mess you have been living with over the past few years or so. So where do you begin?

One thing that you can do in the early stages of your move, in order to reduce stress, is to make a checklist of all of the daily tasks throughout the month to accomplish before the big day. You can do this just for yourself or divvy out different chores amongst your roommates. That way, you can hold yourself accountable by knocking out small things every day to get you closer to the finish line, without having to rush the night before you ship out.

Plus, if you keep to the schedule you have created, you can clock out after your daily chores are completed, giving you time to relax and save the rest of your packing for the next

Get out and get some exercise!

Sometimes the piles of boxes and seemingly endless amounts of dishes and silverware that you need to wrap in crumpled newspaper are just too much for your fragile psyche to digest. Going for a long walk or to the gym to increase your endorphins will get your stress down and allow you to focus on what productive things you can focus on rather than what could possibly go wrong.

Make sure to overprepare

As the old saying goes, it's better to be safe than sorry. For the sake of not overextending yourself or even taking that extra trip to the UPS store to load up on extra banker boxes and packing tape, it's easy to convince yourself that you have properly stocked up on all of the supplies you will need in order to have a stress-free move. But, as anyone who has ever moved can attest, the amount of clutter you have accumulated in your current home or apartment will surprise

That's why it's better to load up on more packing supplies than you could ever hope for, so that each little knickknack that you can't bare to throw away gets a safe spot in the Ŭ-Haul. Plus, by having enough boxes, organizing your belongings while keeping them out of sight will help to decrease your stress levels in the last few days before your move.

Panarin available for Isles' taking

The Blue Jackets star will likely be traded by Feb. 25.

The New York Islanders are expected to be buyers at the NHL's Feb. 25 trade deadline as they improbably sit atop the Metropolitan Division.

How rare has this been for a franchise largely steeped in mediocrity over the past three decades? It's just the third time since the 1989-90 campaign that the Islanders have led their division this late in a season.

Most of the credit will go to the changes atop the organization as new president Lou Lamoriello and head coach Barry Trotz have brought structure and stability to a team that has lacked those fundamental aspects from leadership for quite some time.

What was last year's worst defense in the NHL is now the best as Trotz has turned around his blue line while getting supreme production out of both his goalies in Robin Lehner and Thomas Greiss. In the meantime, the offense has been doing just enough to outscore their opponents, though one more dangerous offensive presence could catapult the Islanders from a nice little team to a serious Stanley Cup contender this season.

Who would have thought that would be the case after John Tavares bolted for the Toronto Maple Leafs back in July?

That puts supreme importance on the NHL trade deadline next month and on Monday night, a premier talent looks as though he's just become available.

Aaron Portzline of the Athletic reported that Columbus Blue Jackets winger Artemi Panarin has declined to talk contract extension with his current club, meaning he will likely be traded within the next month.

"We have informed the team that we are willing to discuss Artemi's future after the season," Panarin's agent, Dan Milstein, wrote on Twitter. "Our priority now is to focus on the rest of the season, trying to win a Stanley Cup for the CBJ & their fans."

It's a course of action the Blue Jackets likely can't take or else they will risk losing Panarin for nothing after the season. The 27-year-old will become an unrestricted free agent on Jul. 1.

Panarin is in the midst of a career year with 19 goals and 34 assists (53 points) in 46 games. That kind of offensive production will be viewed as a premier kind of rental for contending teams during the home stretch.

With 33 games remaining the Islanders still have to hold off juggernauts like the Pittsburgh Penguins and defending Stanley Cup champion Washington Capitals if they want to win their first division title since 1988. Should the team's goaltending or defensive play dip, pressure is going to be heaped on an offense that is ranked ninth out of 16 teams in the Eastern Conference.

Slotting Panarin in on the Islanders' second line for a streaky player like Anthony Beauvillier suddenly creates a fearsome trio alongside Josh Bailey and Mathew Barzal. Behind the first line of Anders Lee, Brock Nelson, and Jordan Eberle that has been clicking as of late, Panarin could make New York's top six one of the best in the NHL.

The Islanders have more than enough assets, whether it's prospects or draft picks, to pull off a trade with Panarin. They also have the cap space to outbid any team in free agency and re-sign him. However, it might be difficult for the Blue Jackets, who sit in fourth in the Metropolitan, to help out a divisional rival.

Proposing a Knicks trade for Anthony Davis

The NBA world is still reeling from the news of New Orleans Pelicans star Anthony Davis requesting a trade on Monday morning, which gives interested parties two weeks to pull off a blockbuster before the league's Feb. 7 deadline. Believed to be among those interested teams is the New York Knicks, currently one of the worst teams in basketball.

In fact, ESPN's Adrian Wojnarowski told ES-PN's Golic and Wingo that the Knicks "will try to be aggressive," to pull off a deal for the 25-year-old All-Star who is one of the best centers in the league.

Obviously, there are a ton of factors working against the Knicks with any proposed interest in Davis.

First off, Davis wants to be dealt to a contender, which the Knicks are obviously not as they are 10-39 on the season. Only the Cleveland Cavaliers have a worse record than New York.

While players normally don't have much say as to where they will be traded, Davis does as he can tell any team that he won't sign a long-term extension with them. That interested party will obviously not be interested in giving up a bounty for the second half of the 2018-19 season and next year only before he becomes a free agent in the summer of 2020.

So unless the Knicks could sell Davis on an immediate future where they compete for an NBA title, the allure of playing in the Big Apple and at Madison Square Garden might not be enough for "The Brow."

Compared to the other teams linked with Davis, which is headlined by the Los Angeles Lakers and

Anthony Davis GETTY IMAGES

Boston Celtics, the Knicks simply can't provide the kind of return others can offer to the Pelicans.

Even though Boston can't trade for Davis until Jul. 1 due to the Rose Rule, the promise of offering players like Jayson Tatum, Terry Rozier, or Jaylen Brown could see the Pelicans hold off on trading the star until the summer. The Lakers though can provide quite a return as well should they be willing to part with the likes of Kyle Kuzma, Brandon Ingram, or even Lonzo

Rall

However, the Knicks do have a wild card in their 2019 first-round draft pick. As it stands, they are strong contenders for the No. 1 overall pick that could turn into Duke star and seemingly generational talent, Zion Williamson. Of course, it all depends on how the ping pong balls fall in the lottery. But should the Knicks continue to tank, their chances will only increase.

New York also has some promising young talent to offer, including point guard Frank Ntilikina and forward Kevin Knox. While Ntilikina has been on the trade block in recent weeks, Knox has not, and both are serious projects before becoming legitimate contributors or even stars at the NBA level.

Kristaps Porzingis could have been seen as a trump card of sorts on a deal for Davis, but the general consensus around the league is that he would not re-sign with New Orleans if he was traded there. The injured 23-year-old star is a restricted free agent in 2019 and will likely be unrestricted come 2020.

But if a star of Davis' caliber makes it known that he's willing to commit to the Knicks, then no asset should be off the table to get a deal done.

PROPOSED KNICKS OFFER FOR DAVIS

Knicks Get: Anthony Davis Pelicans Get: 2019 firstround pick, Kevin Knox, Frank Ntilikina, Enes Kanter (expiring contract)

Would that be enough to get Davis? Probably not. But it's likely the best deal the Knicks could offer at the moment.

METS WANT TO WIN? SIGN DALLAS KEUCHEL

OPINION JOE PANTORNO

Opportunities for the New York Mets to actually become legitimate contenders in the National League are still out there despite pitchers and catchers reporting to spring training in just two weeks.

Realistically, there is no chance that they'll shock the world and draft up a real pursuit of either Manny Machado and Bryce Harper, but general manager Brodie Van Wagenen might not be done yet this winter.

According to Martino, SNY's Andy the Mets are looking for starting pitching depth to round out their rotation. During the team's most successful years, pitching has often been the Mets' calling card rather than an overpowering offense and as it stands, New York has three legitimate starters to rely on.

While it would be unfair to expect Jacob de-Grom to put up the kind of dominant numbers he posted during his Cy Young Award-winning campaign last season, he is still the undisputed Mets ace and is expected to win more than 10 games this time around after Van Wagenen improved the offense this offseason.

A healthy Noah Syndergaard could provide the Mets with one of the most lethal duos in baseball. Despite battling injuries over the last two seasons and not having his best stuff in 2018, the fire-balling right-hander was still 13-4 with a 3.03 ERA.

The top three sudbecame much denly

ERA in his final 15 starts of the season.

Wheeler, Syndergaard, and deGrom ensure that the Mets will have no shortage of dominant right-handed pitchers in 2019. The same can't be said about the southpaws.

Steven Matz proved to be unreliable seeing as he's hit the 150-inning mark just once in his first four years in the majors. While a career 3.98 ERA isn't necessarily bad when speaking about a fourth starter, it is a disappointing mark given the potential Matz had upon entering the league in 2015.

Behind him is the veteran lefty Jason Vargas, who had a horrendous 2018 with a 5.77 ERA. That number is actually kind to the 35-year-old considering he entered August with an 8.35 ERA.

Neither Matz nor Vargas can provide the Mets with a reliable left-handed arm, which could be a major cause of concern as the season progresses.

Luckily for the Mets, Dallas Keuchel is still out there on the freeagent market as a southpaw who can fulfill the pseudo-destiny of the Mets having a dominant rotation.

It's been an inconsistent and rocky three years for the 31-year-old. The 2015 AL Cy Young Award winner sandwiched an All-Star 2017 season in which he went 14-5 with a 2.90 ERA with a combined two seasons that amounted to a sub-.500 record and a 4.11 ERA.

That could be playing a large part as to why he hasn't been signed yet. However, a move to the National League offers the promise of Keuchel lowering that ERA while joining a rotation that will offer plenty of support around him, much like the Astros had done for him.

If he's able to be had for an affordable price, which is really the only way the Mets would consider bringing him on, then New York's top-four becomes quite formidable while allowing the flexibility of optioning either Vargas or Matz to the bullpen.

A dominant rotation allows the Mets some wiggle room for their offense, which does have some hypotheticals to contend with, such as what kind of production they'll be able to get out of Juan Lagares, or if Robinson Cano continue to be a premier hitter in the National League, or if Brandon Nimmo can be the on-base machine he was last year.
